Twelve people were arrested Friday night when Wayne County sheriff's deputies busted what is alleged to be a prostitution ring that offered up women, girls and drugs at a home on Detroit's west side.

About 50 people were at the home on Hubbell, a block south of Schoolcraft, when deputies entered the home, said Sheriff Warren Evans. Eight men and four women were arrested ; 31 others were ticketed for being in a house where illegal activity was taking place.

Three girls, who the sheriff's office said participated in sex acts, and four boys were released to their parents.

One or two of the men arrested lived in the Hubbell home.

The sheriff's office said patrons were charged a $10-$15 cover, $10 for a room and $60 for various sex acts.

Deputies also seized money, two guns, ecstasy pills and marijuana that appeared to be packaged for sale. There were also two makeshift bars in the single-family home where alcohol was being sold without a license.

Evans said at least one woman and two men were reportedly in charge at the party. They are expected to be charged Monday.

"We're very, very comfortable that the cases are good," he said.
