A former Detroit man charged in Houston with attempted murder is being questioned there by Ann Arbor police in the 1980 "Sunday slasher" slayings of three women in Ann Arbor.

Coral Eugene Watts, 28, was charged in Houston Sunday with tying up Lori Lister and Melinda Aguilar, both in their 20s, with coat hangers in their southwest Houston apartment and trying to drown Lister in her bathtub. Aguilar escaped and called police.

Ann Arbor Police Chief William Corbett said Watts was being questioned in the Ann Arbor murders "because of similarities in some of the aspects of the (Houston) crime." He would give no details of the interrogation in Houston.

Watts has been charged in the Houston case with attempted capital murder, attempted murder, burglary and two counts of kidnapping. He is being held on $80,000 bond in the Houston City Jail.

Houston police are also questioning Watts in the murder of Michele Maday, 20, whose nude, bound body was found in the bathtub of her southwest Houston apartment about 6 p.m. Sunday. She was last seen Saturday night.

IN THE ANN ARBOR cases, Rebecca Greer Huff, a 30-year- old U-M graduate student and former airline stewardess, was stabbed to death Sept. 14, 1980. Her body was found outside her apartment complex in western Ann Arbor.

Shirley Small, 17, was killed outside her home at Georgetown Townhouses April 20, 1980. Glenda Richmond, 23, was killed outside her home at University Townhouses July 13, 1980.

The bodies of all three women were found stabbed in the early morning on Sundays. Houston police said Lister was abducted from the parking lot of her apartment building and taken to her apartment at 6:30 a.m.
