DETROIT — Two getaway drivers for the gang of bank robbers known as the "AK-47 Bandits" were sentenced to prison terms Wednesday by a federal judge.

U.S. District Judge Sean F. Cox sentenced Frederick Samuel Humes Jr., 29, to 14 years in prison for conspiracy to commit bank robbery and a firearms offense.

Humes admitted he drove co-defendants Andre Jones and Jawan Martin to five bank robberies in 2006 and 2007 and admitted to supplying them with AK-47 style semi-automatic rifles he bought at the Gibraltar Trade Center, the U.S. Attorney's Office said in a news release.

Cox sentenced Terez Deon Rivers, 33, to 10 years in prison. Rivers admitted he was the getaway driver in six bank robberies between 2005 and 2007.

The case was prosecuted by Assistant U.S. Attorneys Leonid Feller and Mark Chasteen.
