Detroiter guilty in kid prostitution ring

A federal court jury on Monday convicted a Detroit man of operating a nationwide Internet child prostitution ring.

The jury found Robert C. Daniels, 28, who went by Motor City Mink, guilty of eight counts, including running a child exploitation enterprise, which carries a mandatory minimum sentence of 20 years in prison. He's the first person nationally to be convicted of the crime and is to be sentenced Jan. 27 by U.S. District Judge Lawrence Zatkoff.
