Guilty in robbery-slaying

DETROIT - A Detroit man, who had testified he jumped on a woman's chest but didn't mean to kill her, was found guilty of first-degree murder Wednesday in the death of a Cass Corridor apartment manager.

The Recorder's Court jury ruling means Jack Maxwell, 22, will be sentenced to life in prison without parole. Under the mandatory sentence, he can be freed only by a governor's pardon.

He and two other adults were convicted in the Sept. 3 robbery-slaying of Alma Stone, 78, in the Valson Apartments on Fourth Street.
