DETROIT - A 29-year veteran IRS agent was indicted Wednesday on money laundering charges that claim she conspired with a drug dealer to buy a BMW for his use.

On a single day in 2005, Evelyn Millen, 49, of Detroit helped Novi resident LeMauro Coleman purchase five cashier's checks and four money orders totaling $40,000 that were designed to avoid federal reporting rules, according to the U.S. attorney in Detroit. The cash came from Coleman's drug sales and was used to pay off a $65,000 BMW 745i that Millen purchased two years earlier but allowed him to use, the government contends.

Coleman, 28, was also charged with possessing heroin in the indictment.

If convicted, Millen could face up to 20 years in prison. Coleman could receive an additional five to 40 years on the drug charge.
